

CONDUIT

The Newsletter for License Coordinators of TeachingBooks.net

November 2005 Vol. 1, No. 7

Feel free to share pertinent information from this newsletter with your colleagues.

We often hear from schools that they want a quick, easy way to show their community the benefits of using TeachingBooks. Here are two strategies:

Search TeachingBooks

Connect everyone — your librarians, reading teachers, curriculum development staff and art teachers — to TeachingBooks' ever-growing resources by encouraging them to do a simple search.

- 1: Go to <http://www.teachingbooks.net/home/> and sign in.
- 2: Think of a book you are already using with your students.
- 3: Enter the author or title of that book into the purple search box.
- 4: Explore the resources shown on the search results page.

If you or any of your staff would like a one-on-one explanation of the search box and/or a walk-through of the entire site, feel free to email carin@TeachingBooks.net or call (800) 596-0710 to schedule an appointment.

View New Brochure Online

Another way to show your community the benefits of TeachingBooks is to view our new brochure online at <http://www.teachingbooks.net/brochure>. The four-page, full-color document offers a visual explanation of ways to incorporate TeachingBooks into your classrooms and libraries. It's a great introduction for your colleagues who are just now learning about all that TeachingBooks offers to everyone in your school community. Feel free to print and distribute it.

Until next month, enjoy TeachingBooks!

